

The Royal Anthropological Institute's 'Meaning of Water' Photo Contest

Tamil fishermen near Madura. Photo taken in 1902, Hildburgh Collection. Image ©Royal Anthropological Institute 11903

- * Looking for photos that explore human relationships with water.
 - * Open to anyone who is interested in anthropology and photography.
- For a list of prizes, regulations and submission guidelines see reverse side.

Deadline for submissions: 15th March 2010

The RAI's 'Meaning of Water' Photo Contest

We are looking for photos (black and white or colour) which explore the following themes:

Livelihoods & Sustainability Trade & Transport Management & Access Religion & Spirituality

Who can participate?

The competition is open to secondary school students, undergraduate and postgraduate anthropology students, and anyone interested in anthropology, excluding professional photographers.

What do contestants win?

All short-listed and winning contestants will have their work published in RAI educational materials. In addition, for each thematic category a £25 gift voucher will be awarded to the winning photograph.

How do I submit my work?

Submission guidelines and regulations can be found at: www.discoveranthropology.org.uk

Deadline for submissions: 15th March 2010

To find out more about the photo contest and to download an application form visit:

www.discoveranthropology.org.uk or contact Nafisa Fera, the RAI's Education Officer:

education@therai.org.uk / 0207 387 0455